POLAND: Possible Demonstrations

[REDACTED] persistent rumors that another protest demonstration will be held today to commemorate the imposition of martial law three months ago.

[REDACTED] leaflets are being distributed in Gdansk calling for protests, [REDACTED] a resurgence of student activism on campuses this weekend. According to press reports, Premier Jaruzelski on Thursday told government officials to expect more worker unrest. [REDACTED]

Comment: There may be scattered protests, but the security forces will keep them under control. Solidarity leaders have not been calling for such demonstrations, which they evidently view as premature and destined to fail. As in the past, the security forces may provoke some violence to provide further justification for martial law and to enhance their own position. [REDACTED]
